Anthony Sango is an associate in the commercial litigation group. His practice comprises a range of business and civil litigation matters.

Before joining Ansell Grimm & Aaron, Anthony was an attorney at an AmLaw 200 firm dedicated to civil defense litigation. While there, he handled cases related to personal injury, professional liability, sports and entertainment, product liability, and premises liability. In law school, he interned for the Government and Health Fraud Section in New Jersey's Office of the Attorney General and worked as a graduate assistant to Amy Matey, J.D., at the Center for Health and Pharmaceutical Law and Policy. He also participated in Seton Hall Law's Health Justice Clinic where he assisted military veterans in receiving VA benefits and appealing VA decisions, as well as researching and writing on topics such as disability rights and the COVID-19 pandemic.

Anthony was also a judicial intern for The Honorable Nora Grimbergen. Following law school, Anthony served as the judicial law clerk to the Honorable Stephen L. Petrillo in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division.
