Anthony Storrow is an associate in the land use and zoning law group. He handles a broad range of environmental, development, and redevelopment matters. Prior to passing the New Jersey bar exam, Anthony worked as a law clerk at the Firm, assisting with commercial and residential matters in all phases of governmental approvals before municipal, county, and state agencies.

While earning his law degree at Rutgers Law School, Anthony served as a legislative intern for the New Jersey General Assembly and as a judicial extern for the Hon. Susan Schroeder Clark in Tinton Falls Municipal Court. Anthony received his Bachelor of Arts in Geography from The Ohio State University, specializing in studies pertaining to municipal and regional planning.
